A QUARREL ABOUT A COCKED HAT. Whilst one of the largest firets which the United States ever despatched on a hostile purpose is fitting out in our ports for service against Paraguay, the President of this secondary republic has got himself into trouble with Great Britain, or rather with the British minister, because he persisted in wearing a cocked hat in the presence of that very fastidious functionary. According to the account given, Mr. Christie, the British minister, waited upon President Lopez to present his credentials. At this first visit be found Lepcz dressed in a preposterous costume half military, half diplomatic and some parts of it so grossly exaggerated as to make it extremely ridiculous. As a part of his uniform Lopez wore an immense cocked hat all fringed with swap's down and bedizened with gold lace; and this ornament he persisted in keeping upon his head during the whole interview, at which discourtesy Mr. Christie took serious umbrage, as he is most unyielding in matters of etiquette. He retired from the interview rather abruptly, and made offi cial complaint of the affront the President had put upon her Mejesty's minister by wearing his hat at an official interview; whereupon the Paraguayan secretary replied to the it dignant plenipotentiary that her Majesty, the Queen, always wore her crown and robes of Sate when she received foreign ministers, and that the President of Paraguay saw no impropriety in wearing his hat, which, with him, took the place of the peculiar ensign of royalty displayed by the Queen. Mr. Christie, bowever, could see nothing but indignity in the cocked bat, and getting his pasports, without delay took passage in a small English coasting steamer, in which he had not proceeded far before his little vessel came in collision with a Paraguayan man of war and Mr. Christie's dignity suffered the farther infraction of baving to make his escare on board the Paraguayan vessel in a robe de muit. The Minister's arger, of course, was not softened by this adventure.

THE GAME OF CHESS.

The victories and achievements of Paul Moroby and others, in chess playing, have caused the study of the game to become epidemic all over the United States. Consequatly, "prodigies" are fast turning up in chess, and many more are expected. Among the latest there is noticed a youth, residing in Worcester, Massachuetts, who one year ago did not know the moves of chess, but who recently played three games blindfolded at Phosphate of Iron Sand 6.00 the same time.

Also, 'honorable mention" is made of the chess laying powers of a Virginia lady, named Terese Raymond, of A bemarla courty, who after a few months study of the game beats all opponents with amezing rapidity In cities, it is said that chess constitutes the food of most of young men, and their drick lager beer. At any rate, a mania for che-s playing has within some months back seized all our young American male and female generations. Young maidens may be heard to talk of the value of their "pawns," the bold and favorite moves of their "knights," the utility of their "rooks," and the sidelong instituations of their "bishors," with a "out side barbarians" unacquainted with the mysterious movements of chees. L vemaking over a chess board is also carried on in a quiet way. A young lady, who on every occasion, checks your "king," will have no objection to you as a beau and is evidently given to "mating." Joking apart, however. MANUFACTURED BY POTTS & KLETT, and the wide spread of the game of chess among our young folks is desirable; it improves the this keng and calculating powers, and strengthens caution and judgment .-- Rich. Enq.

MORMON LETTER.
